

Recycling in Dublin

How we deal with our waste has a direct impact on the environment.

At the moment, most products we consume are being disposed of in landfill sites across Ireland.

Millions of tonnes of materials that could be recovered and reused for new products are being lost.

If your old fridge no longer works, or you want to get rid of your old clothes, don't bin them! Bring them to a recycling centre.

Recycling centres accept everything from glass, cans, paper, plastics, and textiles to fridges, mobile phones and batteries and for the most part, materials are accepted free of charge.

Recycling in Dublin

How we deal with our waste has a direct impact on the environment.

At the moment, most products we consume are being disposed of in landfill sites across Ireland.

Millions of tonnes of materials that could be recovered and reused for new products are being lost.

If your old fridge no longer works, or you want to get rid of your old clothes, don't bin them! Bring them to a recycling centre.

Recycling centres accept everything from glass, cans, paper, plastics, and textiles to fridges, mobile phones and batteries and for the most part, materials are accepted free of charge.

Recycling in Dublin

How we deal with our waste has a direct impact on the environment.

At the moment, most products we consume are being disposed of in landfill sites across Ireland.

Millions of tonnes of materials that could be recovered and reused for new products are being lost.

If your old fridge no longer works, or you want to get rid of your old clothes, don't bin them! Bring them to a recycling centre.

Recycling centres accept everything from glass, cans, paper, plastics, and textiles to fridges, mobile phones and batteries and for the most part, materials are accepted free of charge.