Reported times to death still average several minutes, with some whales suffering from terrible injuries for over one hour or more. Some whales are re-shot with another harpoon while others are finished off with rifle fire.

Norway claims whales must be culled as they are a threat to fishstocks. They also portray minke whaling as a small scale and traditional activity. However, human over-fishing is to blame for dwindling stocks and this in turn is a threat to whales and the entire marine ecosystem.

To who it may concern,

I am totally opposed to whaling, as it is a cruel practise and mainly done for profit.

I urge norway to ban whaling once for all.

Your sincerely,
